

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

A cooling system for a marine engine conducts water from a coolant pump through the cylinder head and exhaust conduit prior to conducting the cooling
5 water through the cylinder block. This raises the temperature of the water prior to its entering the cooling passages of the cylinder block.